rain-storm added much to the suffering. The fire was discovered in the elevatory well of a second story shoe factory.

The funeral of William S. Sprague took place at St. Peter's Chapel, Narragansett Pier, R. I., Thursday noon, according to the regular Episcopal form. Ex-Governor Sprague and his second wife, Edith Weed, Colonel Wharton and wife, and Mrs. William Sprague, Jr., sat on one side of the church, while on the other side was the mother of the deceased, Mrs. Kate Chase-Sprague, the former wife of William, her daughters, Ethel and Portia, Mrs. Byron Sprague, Mrs. Amasa Sprague and Mrs. Balch. On the completion of the services it was arranged that the interment should be made in Providence. Ex-Governor Sprague and family followed the casket up the late, and Mrs. Kate Chase-Sprague followed balf way up the isle. The latter was overcome with grief, and sank sobbing in a pew. A touching scene ensued, Mrs. Sprague kissing the old Canonchet servants who surrounded her, and who also wept like children.

We invite careful attention to the able communication in this issue of the Farmer, from our Farmington correspondent, on the important matter of the State College and its relations to agriculture. Mr. Knowlton is deeply interested in educational affairs, and is fully qualified to speak on this matter. Truly, if farmers want a school of agriculture, it is for them to see to it that they get it.

We hear very little of the potato rot in Maine now. The prevailing cool weather of late seems to have stopped it all over the State. In Aroostook county so far as we can learn there has been but very little.

of late seems to have stopped it all over the State. In Arosatook county so far as we can learn there has been but very little trouble from rot. It is now quite as good as certain that potatoes will bear a good price through the winter and spring. Arosatook county will reap another rich harvest this year from the crop.

"The real trouble is in getting the right kiled of men for instructors in our landgrant colleges. The idea of the superiority of a literary and classical to a practical education, is so ingrained among the class from which most teachers yet have to be drawn, that it is almost impossible to secure loyalty to the avowed purpose of these schools among those who are entrusted with their control," says Dr. Hoskins.

Northern New York produces large quantities of potatoes for market. This year the crop is in bad condition on account of rot. It is estimated that the loss has reached fully over half the crop. Many fields are so bad as not to be worth digging. It is reported that fully $10,000 have been lost on shipments from the vicinity of Hooselok Falis alone on account of rot after shipment. Many shipments have been returned. Buyers have now refused to handle them and shipments have been returned. Buyers have now refused to handle them and shipments have stopped.

She was fed what green corn and alfalfa she would eat, after having consumed 8 pounds wheat bran, 8 pounds cotton seed meal, 4 pounds palm nut meal, and 8 pounds of corn meal per day. She was milked every 6 hours during the time. It is reported the butter was well worked to a good marketable conditional to the condition of the well worked to a good marketable condi-tion and quality. A good problem for the farmer boys to work out, is the profit of such a cow on such a feed.

The transactions of the Massachusetts fertilizers shou Horticultural Society, Part I, for the year 1890, has been received from the Secretary, Robert Manning. This contains the papers in full, presented at the fortnightly public winter meetings of the society, held during the winter, with discussions following phe same. These papers, given on a variety of horticultural subjects and by the best only when the inches a sign that too ming manure is a sign that too ming the manure is a sign that too ming manure is a sign that too phe same. These papers, given on a variety of horticultural subjects and by the beat authorities among us, are of high value, and together form a rare collection of special treatises not available in other forms. This wealthy society is doing much in deek to a tree when not in lea knowledge of all horticultural shairs. The horticulture of the entire country is much indebted to this Society for the wide influence it has exerted.

It has not been a good "corn year" in New condition this State. The early part of the season them, and have was wet and cold, so that it was late in for himself.—As was wet and cold, so that it was late in summer before it got well established. Then, later on, in just those weeks when the ears were making their growth and the kernels were filling, the weather was cold, cloudy and wet—just the opposite from what the corn crop needed. But in spite of these drawbacks there has been a fairly good crop of corn harvested by those farmers who started out in the spring with an effort to this end. To us there is a great satisfaction in a corn crop, and at this time we feel a good measure of pride, just or not, that we have just completed the husking, and now have safely in store above six hendred baskets of ears, bright and sound, of this golden crop. Had the season been favorable we should have done much better, but the crop as it is has given profitable returns for the outlay in real money value, and in addition brings with it a further contribution of satisfaction over the result, and a sense of independence that goes a great way in contributing to the corn and goes a great way in contributing to the corn erop.

We thoroughly believe in corn as an economic crop in Maine. With the exception of Washington and Aroostook counties, all ever the State it is the surest crop we grow. In a life experience in growing the crop, we have known of only a single year of greenal failure. Grass is called the king of crops among us, but even with this crop there has been more of failure than with the corn.

Maine farmers, then, should raise corn. It gives employment to men and teams, creates a crop out of a soil awaiting to produce it, and keeps the money it costs here at home and among our own people. It is surprising every year at how little of outlay of iabor this valuable crop can be produced Grow it on the warm and dry soils, while the grass is grown on the wet. Now is the time to prepare for it. Plow the land and spread the manure this autumn. Don't be time to prepare for it. Plow the land and spread the manure this autumn. Don't be used to be a juditout the courter, but better the manure w ummer before it got well established.

be of good fodder in the barn. If farmers wald make a success they must strike out for it.

More Agricultural Societies.

Already it appears that different sections of the State are proposing to appear before the eaxt legislature asking for the incorposation of more agricultural societies. In meent years nearly all the societies which we been incorporated necessarily are limited to marrow areas, and such further secieties as are asked for must also correspondent to the subble of the study of the subble of the subble of the study of the subble of the imited to marrow areas, and such further selecties as are asked for must also correspond in this respect. The experience of all the past has been that a society comfined to a narrow territory will receive but little betronage and do but little business, and at sourse the measure of the influence extend will correspond with its operations. As a result, as the laws are now framed, as ald such a society can receive from the State is meagre indeed, and cannot possibly have any important bearing in the remotion of the agriculture of the locality. Tractically, then, this multiplication of societies results in dividing up the appropriation made by the State, into sums so small as to preclude the possibility of any marked effect from their use. We candidly take the question whether we have not societies enough of the kind already. A society to do its work well must be strong, and up to the present time there has been be example of a strong society on narrow limits. Officers of county societies, and senting the dishe and concerned in these matters, should like them attention, and see to it that so tisted are not incorporated where only lasted interests call for them.
